A YOUNG ARTIST
SEEKING IDENTITY
THROUGH HER PAINTINGS

Lucknow | JAN, 2026

Akriti Srivastava, a young artist from Lucknow, is taking her initial steps toward building a distinct identity in the art world through her paintings. Currently a B.Sc in Forensic Science student at Integral University, Lucknow, Akriti is balancing her academic journey with her growing interest in visual art.

Through a small but meaningful body of work, Akriti has begun exploring painting as a medium of expression and communication. Her artworks reflect a conscious effort to combine ideas, emotions, and visual balance, indicating a thoughtful approach even at an early stage of her artistic journey.

Early Works, Clear Intent

Although Akriti has created a limited number of paintings so far, these early efforts signal her intention to take art seriously. Her works show clarity of subject and controlled use of color, suggesting that she views painting not merely as a hobby but as a purposeful creative pursuit.

According to observers, such early experimentation is often crucial in shaping an artist's visual language. Akriti's paintings reflect an inclination toward concept-driven expression, highlighting her desire to communicate ideas rather than focus solely on decorative aesthetics.

Art Alongside Education

Pursuing a B.Sc in Forensic Science while actively engaging in art reflects Akriti's multidimensional outlook. She is keen on developing her creative skills alongside her academic foundation, believing that structured learning and artistic practice can complement each other.

This combination of scientific education and creative thinking may play a significant role in shaping her future direction, particularly as she considers how art can function beyond personal expression.
